Section 3.09(b)(4) is restated to read as follows:

Section 3.09. Disability Pension Payments.

(b) Auxiliary Disability Benefit.

(4) Effective June 1, 1996, a Participant who:

In no event may the provisional auxiliary disability benefit be extended beyond twelve (12) months unless the participant is pursuing a claim for Social Security Disability Benefits, or is appealing a denial of such a claim, and he or she has not yet received a final award or final denial from the Social Security Administration. In no event may the provisional auxiliary disability benefit be extended beyond thirty (30) months unless the participant establishes to the satisfaction of the Trustees that he or she is actively and diligently pursuing a viable administrative claim for Social Security Disability Benefits, or is viably appealing a denial of such a claim, and that he or she has not yet received a final award or final denial from the Social Security Administration. For purposes of this Section, the viability of a claim or an appeal shall be decided by the Trustees in their sole discretion. The amount of each monthly benefit under the provisional auxiliary disability benefit shall be the monthly benefit that would have been due had a Disability Pension (in the automatic form of payment applicable to the Participant's marital status) been payable.
